Report of School Board.

TEACHERS.

To obtain exactly the right kind of teachers is not an easy thing to do. But having once secured them, it is desirable to retain them in the same school for a term of years. This, however, is not often possible, because such teachers are enticed away by the higher wages offered in other towns. So, with our low rate of wages, we have to take such teachers as we can get, and sometimes have to employ new and inexperienced talent. This is done, however, at much risk. A person may have a good education and pass a satisfactory examination before the Board and yet may be a failure in the school room.

To be a success as a teacher one needs to be a "born teacher"—i. e. must love children, must be communicative and not weary of repeated explanations, and must also be born to command. Few persons can acquire the ability for successful teaching if it be not in them by nature. Hence, the School Board can never know who will make good teachers till they have tested them and they often find that they have made a wrong selection even after they have done their very best.

But the Board have been quite fortunate, however, the past year in procuring teachers who have given general satisfaction.

We did not look for perfection in any one. "To err is human." All the schools but three have retained their teachers during both terms. There was no school at the Brook during the spring term; the children attending a part at the Corner and the others at the Chapel. The teachers, in most of the schools, have been successful. In none of them has there been an entire failure. They have worked hard and earned their money.

Mary O. Taylor has had charge of the Calef Hill school both terms; Amy B. Drake the same at the Square; Eva Rand and Mary F. Osgood each one term at the Hunkins; William S. Frye both terms at the Meadow besides several weeks private school in addition; Millie F. Weeks both terms at the Bay; Myrtie A. Hill the same at the Corner; Cynthia A. Hill the same at the Chapel; Nellie R. Batchelder the same at the Osgood; Emma A. Lane has added another year to her work at the New State; Cornelia B. Redding taught the one term at the Brook; Effie A. Brown both terms at North Sanbornton; and Ida M. Dearborn and Inez M. Maynard one term each at Stone Bridge.

TERMS AND EXPENSES.

The Spring term was nine weeks long and the Fall term fourteen. Another week might have been added but for an unusually large outlay for repairs upon school buildings and for school books and supplies. These expenses will be likely to be much less another year because we have on hand a stock of books and supplies which will nearly meet the demand for the year to come.

SCHOOL BOOKS.

The expense for books might be diminished somewhat if the children would take better care of them. Because books cost them nothing, some children seem to think the sooner they destroy them the sooner they will get new ones. The teachers can do something toward correcting this evil, but the parents can do more. The remark of your visiting committee in the school report of last year is worthy of being repeated every year ;—"It is important that children be early educated to care for the property confided to their keeping. Parents and guardians should cooperate with school officers in teaching pupils to care for the property—buildings, books, etc., provided for educational purposes. They should not feel that because these things are provided by the town they may be used and destroyed in a spirit of prodigality. It is not best for the pupil. The habit is bad. It is not for the interest of the citizens. They are taxed to furnish those supplies."

READING BOOKS AND READING.

The influence of parents is much needed in correcting a prevalent error in the methods of teaching reading. It is surprising how many very poor readers there are in our schools, even among the older scholars. The evil originates largely in the desire of children to read in books too hard for them. And this desire is too often sanctioned by the parents. If a child has read one book through once or twice, no matter how well or ill he may have read it, he must go into a higher reader. Hence we find scholars trying to read in the fourth or fifth reader when not able to read well in the second or third. It is the careful drilling in the plain, simple and easy reading that makes good readers, and not the amount they read. The object should be not merely to read the story of one book and then take another book, but to drill on each sentence till the accent, the emphasis, the true sense and expression are acquired. And not till this is done in the first reader should the pupil be put into the second and so on to the end.

Parents sometimes send word to the teacher—"Please allow my boy [or girl] to take the fifth reader" when the child is not competent to read in the third reader decently.

The parents should allow the teacher and the superintendent to judge what books are best adapted to the capacity of the child. Any other method will usually result in a waste of books and a real injury to the pupil.

PROGRESS.

With a few exceptions the pupils in all our schools have manifested a good interest and have made commendable progress in their studies. Examinations and reviews have been searching and in most instances satisfactory. At the commencement of each term the visiting committee made a record of the exact place where each class commenced in the books studied and at the close of the term the classes have been examined upon the work they have been over so that he was able to learn just what progress had been made.

By this method also the competency of the teacher could be easily ascertained. In most instances general satisfaction has been the result.

IRREGULAR ATTENDANCE.

To be absent a day from school, or even from a single recitation, is quite a disadvantage to the pupil.

If absent, of course he falls behind his class. His mind is diverted from his work, he loses interest and usually becomes discouraged.

We hope all the parents will do their very best to avoid the necessity of taking the child away from his regular studies and especially of allowing him to be absent for any trifling cause.

School days and privileges are soon gone.

Youth is the best time for schooling and that youth comes but once in a life time ; and how quickly it goes by !

Give your boys and girls the most liberal opportunity. In the end it will pay well in many ways.
